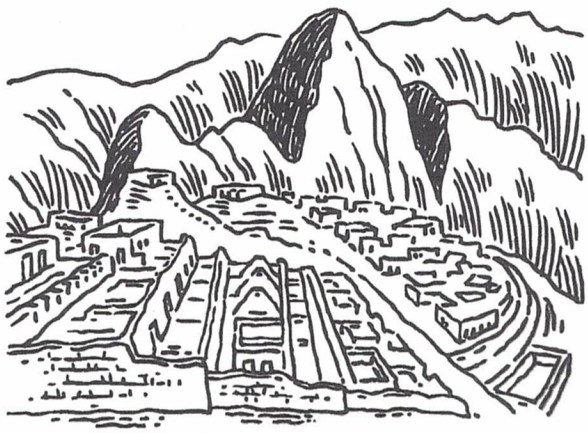
Activity 7

Machu Picchu is an old Incan city found in the Andes Mountains. The Incas lived long ago in Peru. The city was lost. No one knew about it for years and years. Then it was found in 1911.



Buildings were made out of stone blocks. Some of the stone blocks weighed more than three tons (2,722 kg). The heavy stone blocks were placed carefully on top of each other. A piece of paper could not even slide between them! Today, we use cranes and other big equipment to move heavy things. The Incas did it without big equipment.

One reason the city was lost for so long might be

A. the stone blocks hid the city

B. paper could not slide between the blocks

C. big equipment was needed to get to the mountains

D. it is in high, steep mountains where it is hard to travel

Activity 8

In Machu Picchu, the Incas made gardens. The gardens were made on terraces. A terrace is like a large, flat step. The Incas cut into the high, steep mountains. They cut out the terraces. They built them up with stonewalls. They used stone steps to connect the terraced gardens.

Many people terrace steep land. With terraces, more food can be grown. Connect the letters in the box. Show how terracing makes more land for growing food.

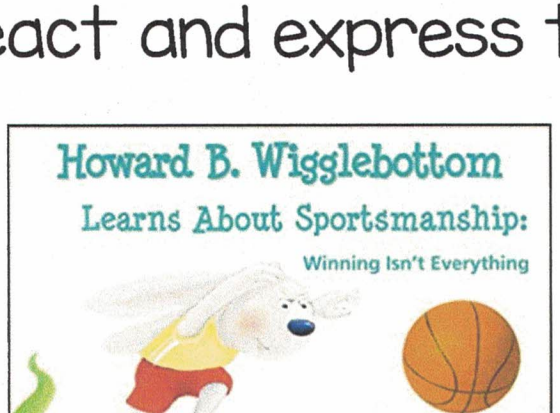
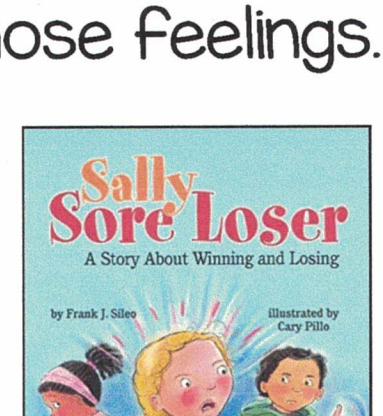
Lesson 8:

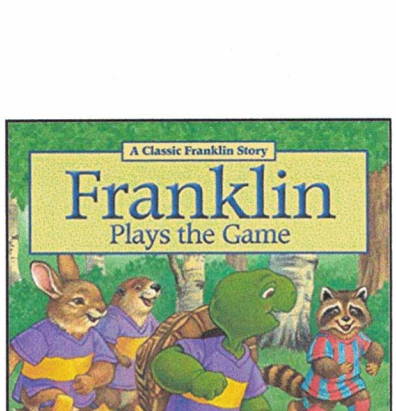
Be a Team Player

K.4.2.C.1a Identify appropriate ways for sharing and expressing feelings and emotions related to different situations (e.g., cooperative-type activities, competitive type activities, at home, in public...)

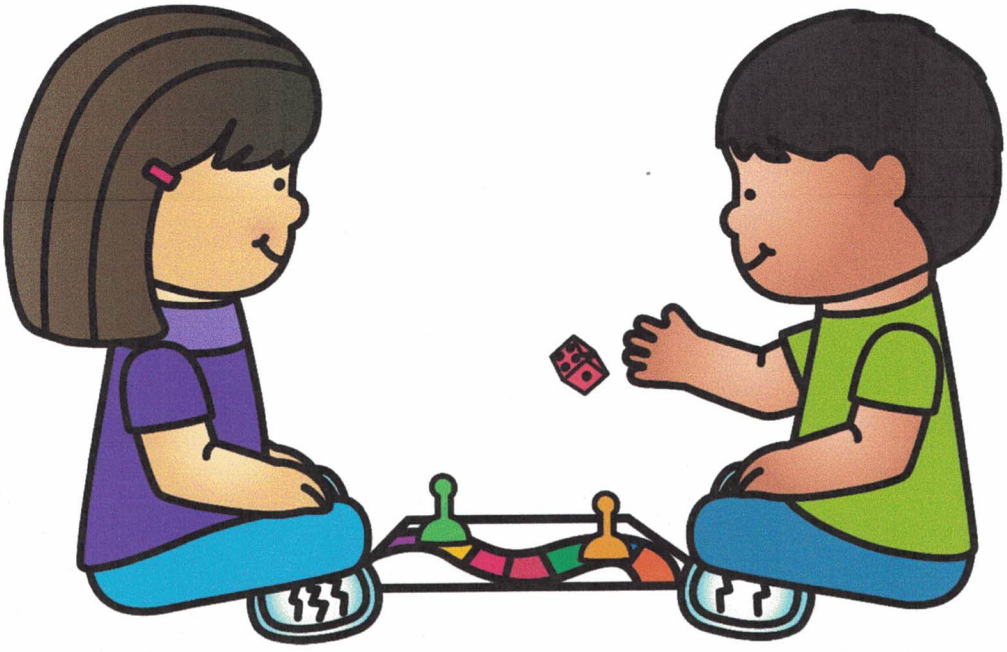
You can read a book to the class about sportsmanship. Discuss how we might feel in certain situations (use the cards to spark discussions), but brainstorm appropriate ways to react and express those feelings.



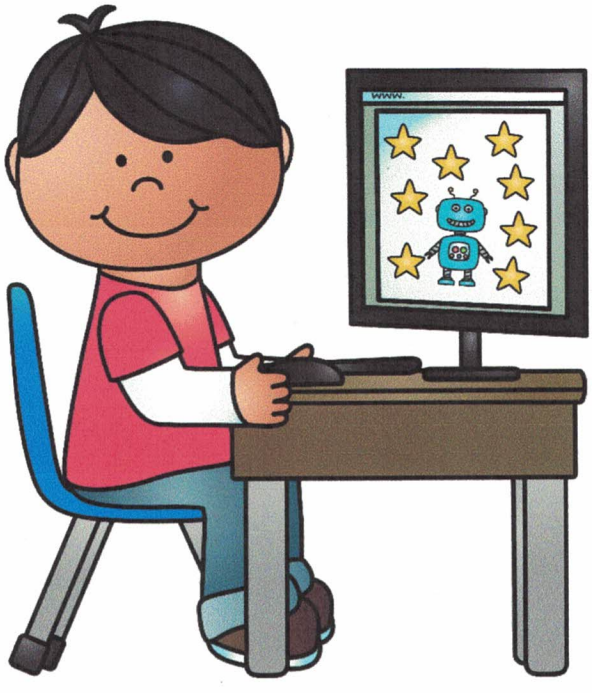




Students will cut out the title and glue it on a page in their journal. Then they will cut out the picture pieces and glue on the top to make flaps. Underneath they will write an appropriate way to react to the situation.



You lost at a board game with your friend.



You lost a level in your favourite video game.

Lesson 4:
EMPATHY

K.4.2.C.1b Discuss ways (e.g., show empathy when others are suffering, help others rather than hurt or neglect, respect rather than belittle, support and protect rather than dominate or ignore...) to communicate with someone who is feeling different emotions (e.g., sad, happy, hurt, angry...)

You are going to show the class four pictures and tell four stories about situations involving kids. Read the scenario (you could cut them out and glue to the back of the picture card), show the picture, and have students discuss how the child in the scenario might be feeling and how they could help that child or an appropriate way to respond to that child.

Students cut out the title and the picture flaps and glue them on a page in their journal (glue the back of the writing part). On the lines, students can write about how they could respond to the child in each of those situations.
